Changes to the Ontario Fire Code for 2026

In 2025, Ontario experienced 110 fatal fires resulting in 125 deaths—an increase from the previous two years. Leeds 1000 Islands Fire Service would like to remind all residents that working smoke and carbon monoxide (CO) alarms save lives.

As of January 1, 2026, updates to the Ontario Fire Code require:

- Smoke alarms on every level of your home
- Carbon monoxide alarms on every level if your home has a fuel-burning appliance or an attached garage

Carbon monoxide is often called the silent killer. It is an odourless, colourless, and tasteless gas produced by incomplete combustion. Exposure can cause headaches, nausea, and, in severe cases, death. This is why it is critical to ensure fuel-burning appliances are properly maintained and that CO alarms are installed as an early warning.

What should I do if my alarm goes off?

- 3 beeps (repeating): Smoke alarm
- 4 beeps (repeating): Carbon monoxide alarm

If your carbon monoxide alarm activates and no one is experiencing symptoms:

1. Exit the home immediately and move to fresh air
2. Call 911 from outside the house
3. Wait for firefighters to arrive and investigate

If someone is experiencing symptoms or cannot leave the home:

- Open doors and windows to bring in fresh air (if safe to do so)
- Call 911 immediately and follow instructions

Common causes of CO alarms

Some of the most common sources we encounter include:

- Ashes from woodstoves stored indoors (even if they appear cool)
- Blocked furnace or appliance vents (snow or ice buildup)
- Improperly maintained or damaged heating equipment
- Running vehicles in attached garages
- Faulty or expired CO alarms (over 10 years old, or installed in damp or dusty areas)

Keep your alarms working

- Test all alarms monthly
- Replace batteries at least once a year
- Replace the entire unit every 10 years, or as recommended by the manufacturer

If you have questions or would like more information, please contact our Fire Prevention Division. We also offer free home fire and life safety inspections.
